European Organisers:

Bertelsmann Stiftung, Gütersloh

The Bertelsmann Stiftung (BST) is the largest private operating foundation in Germany. BST was founded by Reinhard Mohn in 1977 and focuses on areas such as economy, education, health care, civil society and culture. The Bertelsmann Stiftung is independent and non-partisan. It is both a think tank and an agent for social change. Its work is based on the conviction that competition and civic engagement are essential for social progress.

With its offices in Washington and Brussels, the Bertelsmann Stiftung has begun providing a targeted international framework for its ongoing project work. The offices located outside of Germany are dedicated to promoting knowledge transfer and creating new local networks. In January 2012, the Bertelsmann Stiftung established the project "Germany and Asia" in order to foster cooperation, dialogue and exchange between Asia and Europe.

Bruegel, Brussels

Bruegel is a European think tank working in the field of international economics. Established in 2005, Bruegel is independent and non-doctrinal. It seeks to contribute to European and global economic policy-making through open, fact-based and policy-relevant research, analysis and debate. Bruegel's governance and funding model is unique. Its membership includes EU governments and leading international corporations. Its day-to-day work is carried out at arm's length from members' interests. Bruegel's 11-member board appoints the Director and senior staff and has decision-making powers on strategy, research programme, partnerships and budget but no responsibility for research conclusions and publications.

CEPII, Paris

The CEPII is one of France's main research centres in international economics.

The CEPII provides expert advice in international trade, macroeconomics and finance, based on its own data bases and models. Created in 1978, the CEPII is a public institution. The research programme is set by a Board of leading government officials, business personalities, trade unionists and academics and the quality of the research is guaranteed by a Scientific Committee of renowned University Professors.

The centre works closely with main European and international organisations, public administrations as well as private companies, trade unions and the civil society.

All CEPII's work is available on: <http://www.cepii.fr>
