Vision Europe Summit

Winners and losers of globalisation

Collegio Carlo Alberto
Torino, 14-15 November 2017

Vision Europe Summit

Vision Europe is a consortium of think tanks and foundations, launched in 2015, collaborating to address some of the most pressing public policy challenges facing Europe and its member states. Through research, publications and an annual summit, we aim to be a forum for debate and a source of recommendations to improve evidence-based policy-making at both national and EU level and to foster an appropriate European integration. Over the course of the past two years we addressed the pressing issues of the future of the welfare state as well as migration and refugee flows.

For their 2017 common effort, the Vision Europe partners chose to address the ghost that in the last few years – at least following the great financial crisis of 2008, – has been haunting Europe, and the whole world: globalisation itself. More precisely, we decided to deal with the all-encompassing question of “winners and losers of globalisation”. Our goal, in tackling such a controversial issue, was to go beyond taking stock of the impact of globalisation on economic, political and social systems around the world, and, consistently with the main aim Vision Europe has pursued since it was launched three years ago, to make policy recommendations based on sound scientific analysis.

At the summit, stakeholders drawn from politics, business, civil society and academia will have the opportunity to discuss such recommendations. A conference declaration expressing principles and proposals to make open societies and open economies sustainable will be finalized at the summit.

More information about the consortium and the summit can be found on our website: www.vision-europe-summit.eu

Karl Brauner

Vision Europe Summit

Deputy Director-General, World Trade Organization

Karl Brauner has been Deputy Director-General of the WTO since 2013. Prior to that, he held the position of Director General for external economic policy in the German Federal Ministry of Economics in Berlin. During that time, he was Germany's member in the European Union's Trade Policy Committee taking part in all WTO ministerial conferences since the launch of the Doha Development Agenda.

He is a lawyer by profession, with degrees from Germany and the United Kingdom (Cambridge). After working as Assistant Professor at the University of Bielefeld and practising law, he started his career in the legal department of the Federal Ministry of Economics in Bonn in 1983. In 1986-87, he worked at the German Mission to the United Nations in New York. Further postings abroad were in Athens and Sydney.

At the Ministry of Economics in Berlin, his responsibilities covered a range of issues, such as budget, human resources and general administration. He was in charge of cabinet and parliamentary matters and was also involved in the move of the Government from Bonn to Berlin.

As Director General he administered for 12 years all the instruments of export promotion and was also in charge of export controls. His portfolio also comprised all bilateral economic relations outside the EU.

Nauro Campos

Professor of Economics and Finance, Brunel University, London

Nauro F Campos is Professor of Economics at Brunel University London and Research Professor at ETH Zurich. His main fields of interest are political economy and European integration. He is also a Professorial Fellow at UNU-MERIT (Maastricht University), a Research Fellow at IZA-Bonn, a Fellow of the Global Labor Organization, a member of the Scientific Advisory Board of the Bank of Finland, and a Senior Fellow of the ESRC Peer Review College. He received his Ph.D. from the University of Southern California (Los Angeles) in 1997.

Peter Chase

Transatlantic Fellow, German Marshall Fund, Brussels

Peter Chase is currently a Transatlantic Fellow with the German Marshall Fund in Brussels. He recently left the U.S. Chamber of Commerce after six years as its Senior Representative in Europe, based in Brussels; he was Vice President for Europe between July 2012 and his departure in February 2016. After joining the Chamber in April 2010, Mr. Chase played a critical role in the Chamber's campaign to launch U.S.-EU negotiations toward an ambitious free trade agreement, including funding an initial study to demonstrate the benefits of merely eliminating tariffs and helping convince the European business community to support the effort; this led to the formal launch of the Transatlantic Trade and Investment Partnership (TTIP) talks in July 2013. Mr. Chase is widely recognized for his expertise on virtually all aspects of the proposed agreement, including in particular the regulatory and investment issues. He has also led much of the Chamber's work in Europe on energy, capital markets regulation, digital policy issues and EU economic relations with third countries, notably China and Russia. Prior to joining the Chamber, Mr. Chase had more than 30 years of economic, trade and investment policy experience in the U.S. Department of State. The last 20 years focused largely on transatlantic economic relations. He was Minister-Counselor for Economic Affairs at the U.S. Mission to the European Union (USEU) from 2007-2010; Director of the Office of EU Affairs at the State Department 2004-2007; Chief of Staff to the Under Secretary for Economic Affairs 2001-2003; Counselor and Minister-Counselor for Economic Affairs at the U.S. Embassy in London 1997-2001; and Financial Officer and Counselor for Economic Affairs at USEU 1992-1996. Prior to this last assignment, Mr. Chase was posted for two years as Director for Investment Affairs at the Office of the U.S. Trade Representative from 1990-1992; he also served between 1988 and 1990 as Legislative Assistant for Economic and Foreign Policy Affairs with Senator Bill Bradley (D-NJ). The majority of his early diplomatic career, in contrast, focused on China, with assignments to Canton in 1980, the China desk in 1984-1986, and a secondment to Taiwan from 1986 to 1988. Mr. Chase, who grew up in Taiwan, received his Bachelor of Arts in Chinese Language and Literature from the University of Washington in Seattle in 1976 and his Master of International Affairs from Columbia University in 1978. He was married and has three grown daughters.

Gregory Claeys

Research Fellow, Bruegel, Brussels

Grégory Claeys has been a research fellow at Bruegel since 2014 and an associate professor at the Conservatoire National des Arts et Métiers in Paris where he teaches macroeconomics since 2015. His research interests include international macroeconomics and finance, central banking and European economic governance. Prior to joining Bruegel, he conducted research in several capacities, as a visiting researcher in the Financial Research Department of the Central Bank of Chile in Santiago, and as an economist in the Research Department of the French bank Crédit Agricole in Paris. He holds a PhD in Economics from the European University Institute (Florence), an MSc in economics from Paris X University and an MSc in management from HEC Paris.

Martin Daunton

Emeritus Professor of Economic History, University of Cambridge

Martin Daunton was Professor of Economic History at the University of Cambridge from 1997 to his retirement in 2015. Prior to that, he was Astor Professor of British History at UCL. He has also been Master of Trinity Hall in Cambridge from 2004 to 2014, and was twice Head of the School of the Humanities and Social Sciences, as well as serving as President of the Royal Historical Society. He has written extensively on the history of taxation and public finance, including Turking Leviathan: The Politics of Taxation in Britain 1799-1914 (Cambridge 2000) and Just Taxes: The Politics of Taxation in Britain, 1914-1979 (2001). He recently co-edited a volume on The Politics of Public Finance since 1973 (Cambridge 2017), and currently completing a book on the economic governance of the world since 1933.

Denis Mukwege

Mukwege Foundation, Switzerland

Dr Denis Mukwege, born on 1 March 1955, is a world-renowned gynaecological surgeon as well as the founder and medical director of Panzi Hospital in Bukavu, Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC). After having studied in France, he established the hospital in 1999 as a clinic for gynaecological and obstetric care, as he expected to primarily work on maternal health.

Immediately after the opening of the hospital, Dr Mukwege noticed the high number of women in the region who needed treatment of their wounds caused by violent sexual assault and rape. His first patient was a survivor of rape whose reproductive organs had been destroyed.

Over the years Dr Mukwege became the world's leading expert on "repairing" the internal physical damage caused by rape.

In October 2012, he was violently attacked and his family was held at gunpoint at his home in an assassination attempt. Joseph Bizimana, his friend and security guard, was killed. The attack came several weeks after a speech at the United Nations where Dr Mukwege denounced the country's decade-long conflict and called for those responsible to be brought to justice.

Dr Mukwege and his family fled to Europe for a short period of time. Despite continuous threats against him, he returned to Eastern Congo in January 2013 and resumed his work at the hospital, responding to the call from the women of Bukavu.

Dr Mukwege has become a global advocate for gender equality and the elimination of rape as a weapon of war. He received numerous international awards for his work, including the UN Human Rights Prize, the Sakharov Prize of the European Parliament, the Olof Palme Prize, the Calouste Gulbenkian Prize 2015 and the Clinton Global Citizen Award. TIME magazine listed him among the world's 100 most influential persons and the Carter Foundation named him a "citizen of the world."
